Writing about English Literature

Dear readers

Dear Readers.

My rough draft was not very complete, by any means. While I had a vague direction of the essay in mind, but it was very difficult to crystallize something concrete out of this “direction”. I wanted to write an essay based on the experiences I have had with virtual reality. As a long-time VR fan, the idea of “being in the online world” was very appealing to me.

However, due to personal complications towards the end of the semester, I was overburdened with work, which continued even after the last day of the class. (In fact, I am writing this letter after working at a conference as a staff.)

I believe I have pretty solid thesis statement. However, since I was not able to work on this essay continuously, I believe the argument is a bit “jumpy” occasionally. If I were given more time, I would like to fix the jumpy arguments and smooth things out.

Sincerely,

Juhun Lee.
